

to school?)

Well, yeah, I remember the Proctors down here. And Reeses down here. Then Sanders over across Pine Creek. Them about the all when I was going to school for--that was all I remember.

(Well. Well, it wasn't very thickly settled then.)

No. And all this in here was all big timber.

(Well. Well, then they cleared out all this valley here since you've been in here.)

Oh yeah. Old man Proctor he had a little field right down in there below his house. Then down here at the next place, Reeces, they had a fenced place where they lived down there.

(Yeah.)

Then way over there was Sanders place. Yeah, there wasn't too many houses.

(Well, now this place what they call Christie up here, that community. Is that an old place too?)

I guess it is. Yeah, I guess some families living there along about the time being when I used to go to school. Old man John Christie lived right this side of that little old creek there as you go up the highway.

(Yeah)

That little old log house is on that side of the road just before you get to the Tyner Creek. He was an old time settler.

(Well)

I guess there was several of 'em, but I just forgot them people. I don't know--

INDIANS ENJOYED RIDING THE TRAIN TO MUSKOGEE AND WESTVILLE

(Yeah, that must have been quite a day when they had a railroad in here.

Get on a train and go to Tahlequah, Westville.)

Got into Tahlequah, I think it was the day or the day before Fourth of July on the train. Boy, I tell you, seem like people--They just loaded that train
