

requested to christen this baby and he remarked that the two ones that were authorized to do such a ceremony was Mrs. Rose Hill and Mrs. Rose Pipestem. Mrs. Rose Pipestem had been selected through her clanship to christen this young baby and so he turned the floor over to Mrs. Pipestem. At that time Mrs. Pipestem thanked him and thanked Mrs. Burris, the grandmother and Mrs. Hamilton, the great-grandmother for the honor they were bestowing upon her. She had looked up and said we would go according to the deer clan so she therefore named the baby "Hum-pa-to-ka" and that she would honor it and all such as that. Of course all this is taking place at the dinner table and after she had did that she gave the floor back to Mr. Red Eagle and Mr. Red Eagle at this time had selected Mrs. Rose Hill to return the thanks for the food for the dinner meal. She wanted to say something in her behalf before she returned the thanks and she was relating the story of many years back that she remembered the marriage of Mrs. Glenn, Mrs. Lorena Woods and Mr. Elmer Pryor and she was trying to tell the people in her humble way why she was there, I mean at this dinner. She was telling the people she had been selected as one of the bridesmaids for the bride, Miss Lorena Woods at that time and that she had considered it another high honor and that she had thought a lot of this lady ever since and that she was glad to be here at this dinner. She had seen these families grow and then she would return the thanks. She being a Catholic returned the thanks in the Catholic style. Then after that, we proceeded to have our dinner. This was in essence what took place on this day and like Mr. Red Eagle said it would probably be one of the last affairs of this sort and it might be the last ever to take place. Of course, I agreed that the older customs such as this, was fading out of existence and the modern generation was
