

they just speak and sing the Ponca language. That is really something.

Unidentified voice: (How did they start it up?)

(I really don't know, do you know (to Leonard))

(I have a feeling that when they first started, they paid dues to come out there, and just sing for them at the dance. They wanted to have a dance in Los Angeles, and they went out there and I supposed they taped these singers, and learned the songs from them, and about the language, I don't know how they got their languages. Unless they just had some of their,-- didn't have a class in this special language in the High School in Ponca City. They had a class and to teach this Ponca language to the students in High School.)

Woman's voice: (That's in Norman?)

(Irrelavent conversation.)

Woman's voice: (My son is going to continue his schooling at O.U.)

Oh, is that so? Well, it's a good school.

Unidentified voice: (They have much to offer.)

(Conversation not clear.)

DISCUSSES MODERN ACADEMIC COMMUNITY ACTIVITIES

(What do you think about these kids that are disrrupting our campuses?)

Well, it's a mess. I hope it dies down pretty soon, but I don't, you know, it is hard to tell. Berkeley, of course, has been one of the most active campuses in that way, have had so much trouble there. I got my first real dose of tear gas, on Bastille Day, what was the July 28, or something like that. I was at our bank which is right next to the campus, Berkeley, and when I came out why, you know, I guess you have been reading about that People's Park in Berkeley, I guess some students had marched on the
