

They died right close together. She was doing nurse when, you know, it was during the way when Charley went.

(They died in the war?)

Maggie: Huh-uh, he come back, you know, and one did, you know. The other one's teaching, you know in Okay. I don't know, they might be just cousins. They just didn't last long after Edna died. The baby died.

And I was trying to get their picture. I'll show it to you. He was teaching in school you know, and I go to visit them once in a while. Went to Siloam Springs.

(Interruption)

--said, "Sally, don't you tell Mike that I'm going to wear this." (laughter)

(You mean they got different wigs?)

Yeah.

Maggie: Uh-huh. (laughter) I think our grandma and her mother--they used to live over here, you know, down the other--you know, in field a long time ago. I remember mama told me--I think I was little when my grandma died.

Died over here.

Maggie: Yeah, it was over here?

Um-hum.

Maggie: See? (showing pictures) See how little I was at that time?

(Oh.)

Maggie: Yeah, I don't remember seeing grandma, you know, their mama. And after I found out, you know, ther's just Aunt Susie and Jim and Webb Cochran you know and their wives.

(How many was in your family Aunt Susie--when you was growing up--when your brothers and sisters--?)

Five.

(Five of you?)

Um-hum.
