know how come that water got like it did. They been testing with seismographing here and there. Might have hit a deep vein somewhere, cause that water got to be gyppy. It ain't real gyppy, but it's hard. Good to drink, we drink it time I live down there.

(How did Connie Mae get that land she owns there at the southwest corner of that road that goes north to Tweet's?)

Oh, that was her husbands's.

(That was his first allotment huh?)

Homer. I think he traded that land for a place he used to own back up towards Cache Creek.

(Did Homer ever live on that allotment?)

Which?

(The one on the southwest corner we were talking about?)

Yea, they used to live down there. Just back east about half a mile. They had a house, they used to live down there. We stayed there with them. They had two houses together. We go down there the folks and I and we stay in one house. And they live in their own house. Yea, they had two houses there together. Yea, they used to live down there. Next to the creek.

(That's that land that Connie Mae sold to the Apache Blackfeet Society?)

No, that's the land they traded for that land down there. See, that place down there I think belonged to Kiowa Charlie (n.b. The land in question at this point is still the southwest corner quarter section on the road running north to Herbert Redbone's house.) That family, Sadie Nestell and that bunch, and Homer he traded that place..his hundred and sixty over there for this (i.e. the SW corner in question.) hundred and sixty. I don't know how he built a house up there on the hill. And when he died, my sister, and Marvin and Rachel fell Heir to that place and well, they sold that place down there on the corner. Course, Marvin and Rachel they agree. They all sign it and sold it.
