

been to Fort, Dallas, Texas 2 weeks ago. We went to Fort Worth, El Paso and all around Dallas. I never been to Dallas. The reason I went there was to visit Daniel, he was going to fly to Germany. Texas National Guards. So I went down to see him. Well, according to the Bible, there's a Heaven there's a Hell, and, I think, Shakespeare came up with the Limbo. I don't know if this is part of the Bible or not because I'm not too familiar with it. Anyway, this is a place where you're neither too good or bad. You just float around forever in this limbo. Well, it wasn't clear in my mind until I went down and visit Danny and Beg at Dalls and got on that loop 12. And there's people still circling there. They must have been there for years. I give up myself but somebody pushed me off, but I guess they're still floating. This is a portrait of Danny when he was 14 and a portrait of my life when I was that age. I used to be midnight oil. I used to read by that old kerosene lamp at the kitchen table at OkTaHa, waiting for the horse trader to come.

TAKING A BATH

These are, if you lived on a farm where there's not much water. You had to haul it from the spring. You bath in a number 1, number 2, number 3 tubs. If you were small you bathed in number 1, you wash your feet in, then, the kids can sit down on number 2. And when you got grown, you got to bath in this one. You had to haul water a couple of miles from the spring. We used several different water for several different people from the family so they didn't have so much trouble with that water. You couldn't sit down, because you had to do it in this manner. You washed your hair, and you washed everything in this manner like this. It's called number 2, tub or sitting up bath.
