

They all did. The Turtle turned over on his back, and they made this arrow straight. The Turtle placed his back leg against the bow and he pulled the string to let arrow fly. When he pulled it, he let go, and when the arrow was loose, it flew into the air and hit the Ka-la-nu' right in the middle of the heart, and the bird fell turning over and over. When he fell to the ground with this arrow, they all touched at him as he flopped about. The Turtle spoke up and said, "Now, don't you break my bow. I like it very much." One of the elderly animals stood up and said, "I'll make them stop." But they were all in a fierce scramble with this bird, and they broke the bow all to pieces. The Turtle was very angry because this bow was the best that he had ever made. He liked it very much. That's why in his heart he was very angry about the bow. He was really angry. Then, the various animals considered what to do about this Ka-la-nu'. "What shall we do with him? Shall we divide him up?" "Yes, we'll divide him up after we after we take his feathers off and we'll cut him up. We'll cut the meat and divide it." The chief said, "Now, let's give the choice piece to the Turtle, the favorite piece of meat. What part is your favorite piece of meat?" The Turtle was asked, "We want to cut the part that you like best." "No part of it. I don't like to eat part of it," he said. One of them said, "The back has the best meat on it. Go ask the Turtle if he like the back." "Would you like the back piece, Turtle?" they asked him. "I don't want any, " he spoke angrily. "Would you like the liver?" they asked him. "No, I don't want it. That would make me sick." "Well, would you like the heart?" "No, I don't want to be heart sick." Then, they gave up and they said, "You must say what part