July 24, 1969

Index side A, recording time 10 min.; interview time one hour.

Informant: wilson Terrapin, 66-year-old Cherokee, Mulberry Hollow, Adair County, Oklahoma

Subject: Far back in the Cherokec Hill country is the community of Mulberry Hollow. Near the held of this hollow there used to be an old log church building partly shaded by a large mulberry tree. The church and the hollow became known as Liulberry Church and Kulb rry Hollow. The church has been gone a long time, but few changes have come to this serene and peaceful valley. Many Cherokees have been born here and spent all their life here. Many still live not too much unlike days of long ago. Their way of life has been little 'affected by the rapid march of progress. Mulberry Creek flows gently down the valley and its clear cool waters are one of the joys of these people. Lany crawdads have been taken from the little creek. It has also been the scene of many a washday" for the Indian woeman. It has long and still is the "bathtub" for many on a hot summer night. Homes built long ago nestie upagainst the hillsides. To the delight of any Indian, tre s, .. bushes, and plants of all kinds grow profusely. The newer Mulberry Hollow Church is the center of com unity activity. Here gather the McLemores, Swi mers, Cheweys, Elackbirds, Hogners, Eeans, Alexanders, Terrapins, Hoskins, Holfe, Ind · many others.

to the north is Abbit Trap community, to the east is Acavi. e country, and to the west is Caney Creek Valley. To the south is lots of whitemans.

This is the country wilson terregin has known all his life. We have the veled and hunted offer a wide breaking his home in these whills and knows well most of the people, places, an a lot of the hopenings.

At the beginning of this visit witson tells about the old grist mill that used to be at Hummingbird Springs at the head of Caney Creek. The Hummingbird family had settled there after their arrival from Coording in 1839 and was one of the first to start a mill according to stories his old people had told.

Anoth r of the original settlers of that area was the Adairs. Over on the mountain south of Coney Creek was the home of Squirrel Adair, who lived long before allson's time, but he remembers his folks talk about him. He was a good and industrious man, and helped his neighbors in many ways. On the side of his mountain is a little abendoned cemetery named for him. His tomatone reads simply Squirrel Adair, Agod 87 years. Near the old Adair home there is a little Lonely cabin where Tsi-go-u Christic lives. She is past 90 years old, and refuses to leave her home. Her family was the adairs, and it is hard where the was born to the she wishes to live out her days. The love of homeland to the Indian is hard to comprehend by the whiteman.