

Third male voice: Yeah, I think they're better. There's lot of people, I believe, like them crawdads bets.

Fred: I have tasted big turtle. Once or twice, but I know I can't even tell you what it taste like.

Third male voice: They're pretty good. I've eat turtle soup.

(Yeah, I've eat turtle.)

Thrid male voice: Fried turtles.

('Course one of the best ones I like was the eel.)

Yeah, I never eat it. They say they're awful good.

(Sure good.)

Thrid male voice: Yes, they are.

Fred: They say these gars good. But you got eat it while its hot.

Said after it s cold its no good.

Third male voice: Kinda like rotten wood whenever they're cold.

Yeah, that's what they said. Get cold, its not good. When it was hot they say its pretty good. Yeah, you take them Indians they eat everything that was eatable, I guess.

Third male voice: When locusts show up in the early spring why they'd gather them things and parch'em.

Yeah, they said they were good.

Third male voice: Yeah they said they were good. We used to eat'em.

And I've heard--I don't think the Indians I know of, but white now.

I rea. where somewhere they eat grasshoppers. They said theywere good,

I don't know how they cooked'em or anything We used to live in Copan

(static on tape)

(Yeah.)

And one summer there was a lot of grasshoppers, he was about a year old, I guess. Sitting on the--they just put a diaper on him, you know, set
