

built for the Kiowa people in the Mount Scott area. Guitone was too young to go on the warpath before the end of the wars. He was nonetheless widely acquainted with the participants and exciting events and well informed on some of the Kiowa history. M. tons n, better known as "Mother Daisy" (name not clear), the daughter of Tsaddlekongia and (name given here not clear). Soon after the Allotment Act she selected the present place--the home site--and selected there her allotment. During the Pre-Allotment (days) it was a historical landmark. Here on this site was where the Kiowa, Comanche rebellious troops surrendered and gave up their arms to Major George W. Schoffield (this name should be checked out.). It was a happy union, and from this first prosperity to smile upon them a son was born.

Guy, you were the first-born son. You have the character of quick wit and acute mental perception. You've been exposed to early primitive environment. You became a part of and alert to any frontier way of life. You lived in a tipi, and because there were no other houses being built for Indians. A few years later your father hired some Mexicans to build a house from lumber of red oak and shingles were made--were home-made.

Outstanding achievements of childhood. At your early age you learned to mount a horse and you travelled up and down the country roads. You were taught to use the bow and arrow. Your first game that was killed was a sparrow hawk. Your parents really took a great excitement at this outstanding childhood achievement of their son. Kiowa custom demanded celebration--a giveaway period for the honor of a son's first manhood achievement. A horse and a live beef were the price Jimmy and Mother Davy paid to express their appreciation and the proud honoring on behalf of their son's first achievement found in a son.

Guy, you began your research way of life early. You were told that there was a school nearby for Indian boys and girls. Your father took you and knocked on the door of civilization and presented you
