

father who I knew. He's the one who told them to surrender. And he told me the story that's always bothered me when I think about it, what they done to those other renegades.

(Several minutes of irrelevant comments.)

ADDITIONAL COMMENTS ABOUT CRAZY HILL,

Now getting back to Crazy Hill, there's nothing superstitious about it.

(In the old days, did people ever go up there to pray?)

Yea, on that hill, but this murder, it happened just west of there, on that slough. But people would sleep up there, try to get power. But after that murder took place, they didn't do that. We got another one over hill, oh, about four miles east, back south, Little Hill. They claim some graves up there. And they claim that they see lights up there certain times. I never did see, and I've got...I'd like to locate that.

(Several minutes of irrelevant conversation.)

COMMENTS ABOUT APACHE SPRINGS

Apache Springs. You never did get the story of Apache springs. Through this gap, apaches used to camp over there by this springs.

(Now what spring is that?)

Over here, about three or four miles, then you go through that gap.

(South, on that new road to Medicine Park?)

Yea. First part of that spring, always water there. That's where Apaches used to camp. I can't recall some incident that happened there. However, there's other that claim that it was there before the Apaches were there. Even that cemetery, there's a lady there. One of Apache Ben's relatives, she hung herself there at that bridge. You go a mile