

(No, that one I'd never heard of.)

It used to sit (words not clear - tape too fast)

(Well, I see, some of the things we knew about a long time ago they are gone now. Younger people never even heard of.)

No, I suppose now. Somebody I know, right now, I don't recall'em.

They just move the building out. And they fell down. Well, just like Centralia.

(Yeah, Centralia's gone.)

Well, it was good size little place.

Bigger than White Oak or any of 'em.

(But any town along--Those early day railroads, you know, they had all kinds of people coming and going and stopping off.)

Well, now when you lived in Indian Territory you had to be pretty rough, you know. You had to protect yourself. It was awfully rough. See, there's no law in here whatever. And outlaws came over here to get away because there wasn't no law.

(That's right.)

It was pretty rough. I heard my dad talk a lot about it.
