

(Uh-hum. I guess you remember your father.)

Oh yes I remember him. He passed away after Walter and I married.)

(Oh he did)

Uh-hum

(I don't remember him)

He'd be over a hundred years old now.

(I don't guess I remember him.)

You might not.

(I know your mother though.)

Uh-hum. Well, she's got her great, great, grandchild now, her first one.

(Oh)

Five generations.

(Jeanetta's side)

No Lisa's

Uh-hum

(oh, I don't know why I keep saying Jeanetts)

Fife Beaver, you probably know her more than you do Lisa. Fife Beaver's son, well they, they got married and they had a baby. That's five generations.

(oh. Fife. Seems like I remember him. You know they've been gone so long you know, I've forgotten some of them)

Yeah.

He's down around, oh Council Hill. Not Council Hill but Hoffman.

(Uh-hum. Well is there some other things you think might of be interest to me?)

Well no, I don't know.

TALKS ABOUT EARLY INDIAN COOKING AND HER LIFE
