

(He must have saw it because stomp dance (speaks Creek) (speaks Creek)

(Speaks Creek)

(Was it Jerome or the others that drew it? I must have been Tony.)

I don't remember

(Speaks Creek) My youngest boy he had some drawing up there too. And I think he had one of those ribbon dances.)

Maybe that was it. Anyway I think it was a Tiger. I know Lee just had a fit.

(Yeah. See my youngest boy had some pictures up there and three months ago.

They sold it, some lady wanted his. And they took it out. (speaks Creek)

Sold it forty-five dollars. (speaks Creek)

Oh.

(Speaks Creek)

Maybe it was his picture.

(Yeah. See my dad used to go to those places.) (I don't know why. I guess I was mean enough to and had a chance to go but I just never did to to them.)

(Speaks Creek) Dad and mother and all them they just wore us out in church you know. And oh, I'd want to go so bad. (speaks Creek) And I think I was eighteen or nineteen years old before I ever seen it. And I was so disappointed

(Speaks Creek)

(Did you ever go to an Indian Fiddle Dance?)

No. I never did. That's something I would have like to have seen. And when I, I guess they had them when I was small but see my dad wouldn't let us go to anything like that. (speaks Creek)

(I hear so much, you know when I take recording, so much of them talking about them fiddlers. Indian Fiddle dances. Some of them said they had their own songs, Indian songs.)

Well. Now that I just don't know much about. (speaks Creek)

(Oh)

That's all I known about. (speaks Creek.)
