

No, Dege, D-e-g-e, Dege. She was 12 years old. I've heard him tell, about that. She was the first person to be buried.

(Well, and that was your father?)

Uh-huh, Jim Gamble.

(About what year would that have been?)

Oh, I don't know. I wished I'd pay more attention. I've heard him tell these things years and years ago. Now, I've heard him and Mr. Wright both talking about this old mill back down here.

(Yes).

Well, I've heard that story all my life and until less than a year ago I never did know where it was. But I finally got to go see it and that old mill is still standing.

(Well, still standing?)

Uh-huh. And I have pictures that we made over there. And we hauled things that we used from Vinita down here:

(Well,)

(Tape is blank for several minutes.)

And I sit here and talk about the good stories sometimes. You know how you do. You don't pay any attention to things like that.

(Yes)

You just ask for your help.

(That's right. Had to go clear to Vinita to get supplies before they had a town of Pryor. You'd think driving through there, that Pryor had been there forever.)

That's right. I can remember when there wasn't, but two grocery stores there.
