

Uh-huh. I think so now. They had one. The Balleu's back home.

(Balleu)

(Not clear) sitting over here. It's been built about 15 years ago since I been here.

(That's Indian church there, too, isn't it?)

Yeah, supposed to be. Indian and White.

(You know down there just before you get to the highway 68 on that south side, an old church house looking building. What was that thing, Phillip?)
Where?

(You know down there by the north of McLainn cemetery.)

North, huh?

(Yeah. You know where you turn to come this way?)

Uh-huh.

(That old building sitting there.)

Holiness church.

(That was an old church there.)

Uh-huh, Holiness.

(Yeah, look like it had been there a long--)

They used to have just an arbor, you know.

(Yeah)

Tent--arbor.

(Yeah)

Call 'em the holy rollers all the time.

(Yeah)

They built a church after that. I don't know that fella that's suppose to preach to 'em. They lost it someway.

(Well)

I don't know, the people wouldn't observe, I guess.
