

Oh yea, all their belongings. Shoes. Like what they owned. Their arrows bows, clothes, mocassins. They don't keep anything because it brings back memories. So they dispose of it that way. What they don't bury, they burn.

(What about his horses?)

Well, they bury them. Sometimes they kill them and bury them with them or give them away to other tribes. They don't want anything to remember him by.

(What about his house?)

What? Ain't no house in them days. We talking about tipi days.

(What did they do with his tipi?)

Burn it.

(Burn it?)

Yeah.

(What about his peyote equipment?)

They don't have peyote in them days.

(Yeah, but I mean later. Say like your grandfather.)

They bury it with him.

(Did they put it all in with him?)

Yeah and what they leave out they wait for a big flood when the water creek runs and they go down and dispose of it that way.

END OF TAPE