

(Well.)

GRANDFATHER WAS A GOOD MUSICIAN

Georgia: And it was my grandfather's picture, and---

(Well. And what was your grandfather's name?)

Georgia: George Still.

(George Still.)

Georgie: Uh-huh, and they named me after him. They thought I was gonna be a boy. Since I was a girl, they just put g-i-e, Georgie.

(During your brother's life time, he must have traveled around a whole lot---)

Georgia: He did.

(---and done it in a long (not clear). What was his principle interest in work?)

Georgia: Well, he worked at the court house here a lot. But when he was-- when he was twenty-one, he was a county assessor, wasn't he, LeVina?

(Hmmm.)

Unidentified voice: (not clear)

Georgia: Uh-huh, and he married lot of couples while he was in there.

Unidentified voice: When he was twenty-two--that's when he issued several marriage license.

Georgia: Oh, yeah, uh-huh, yeah. And, well, he was interested in a lot of things. He wanted to educate himself more, and he and his daughter took lessons through the mail.

(You know, that's typical of a lot of Indians.)

Georgia: Uh-huh.

(They wanted to get more education some how.)

Georgia: Yeah.

Unidentified voice: When the old court house burned, he was sitting there
