

Georgia: One boy at Pryor, and then, there's a one at Muskogee that's a lawyer.

(Well, then, that was with the Langley family in there.)

Georgia: Yes, that's some of us.

(Now, seems like I have read somewhere he was from that family that the town Langley got its name.)

Unidentified voice: That's right.

Georgia: Yeah. And Langley was where mother went to school when she first went to school, north of here.

Unidentified voice: No, she was at Salina Orphan Asylum.

(Well, hmmm.)

Georgia: And came down here with her aunt, and Uncle John (not clear). And so they let them have her. And her name was Mary Elizabeth, but they had so many Marys in the family, why, they changed her name to Molly. I used to call her Molly, didn't I?

Unidentified voice: Hmmm.

Georgia: Called her Long Molly. (laughter) She was tall. All we girls were short. She was taller than her daddy.

(Do you remember, Miss Still, anything about an old Baptist mission that was in Tahlequah a long time ago?)

Georgia: Yes.

(I've had elderly people tell me that they went to school there.)

Georgia: Yes, they did have school there. LaVina knows more about it than I do.

Unidentified voice: Where the junior high school is now.

Georgia: Uh-huh.

(Well. Where the junior high school is now.)

Georgia: Yes. Didn't you go there?
