

OLD FORT DAILEY--ALMOST FORGOTTEN

(I went to Ft. Dailey. I didn't know it was there, though.)

Mrs. Right north of Bacone college.

(Well.)

Mrs. Its right there. Let's see, right there across from old-- Bill. You know along Highway 16 where the bridge crosses the river there?

(Yeah.)

Well, you go down across the bridge and the first section you come to.
It's about a quarter or maybe a half of a mile, along the east toward Hyde Park and it's--

Mrs. And you have to get off into--Later you have to run off north and uh--an old mound region where they had dug into that embankment.

(Yeah that's it. Uh-huh I know about where that would be, then.)

Bill. Yeah. Just across that bridge and the first section--

Mrs. You'll have to inquire from someone in there.

(Yeah, uh-huh)

Bill. You go up a little rise, up the hill there (words not clear) You'll find one of those old mounds and, of course I imagine it'll have it reported on one of them.

Mrs. Don't you know there's graves out there.. They would be some turn up there. You know Miss Woods' parents were buried out there.
They took her body to the cemetery there. She's in there someplace but I don't know exactly where it is. Because we never have been there but--It was close to that baby--. (Sentence not clear) 'cause that's all their land.

(Yeah.)

Mrs. That's a lot of room.
