

(I bet it did and--)

Have you ever been in a wagon with the wheels just bouncing along.

(That must have been hard riding?) Laughter.

Nobody thought anything about it.

(No. And did no one do anything about the spring seats hardly?)

No-o-o.

(Nice soft seat but sit there and bounce.)

Just sit there and abounce. Yeah, we've done that for years and years.

Finally the cars got in style.

(Yeah.)

Got Model-T model first, then it went from there to Chevrolet, then went to a Ford.

(You know you don't hardly see a wagon any more, do you?)

No-o-o you don't

(It's just the very seldom that you ever see a wagon. And I believe that I've heard of people saying in the early days in this country that people use oxen to pull wagons.)

They did.

(And that something that I've never seen.)

Dad had a pair of them. Yes, sir.

(Yeah.)

But he didn't have a big old heavy wagon he had a cart. Of course it had four wheels it needed to be, it wasn't too heavy. I've seen him go to the mill and take corn and have it ground and (not clear) it worked in.

(Where did you have to go to the mill?)

Oh they had that little old--well that was back in Kingseed that was where I was raised at--(not clear) I came out here in 1918.

(Well--)
