

(Interruption)

--up this holler there just a little bit lived Ned Christie. His house sat right here.

(Well.)

Turn right on around.

(And what creek is this or hollow?)

This is Bitting Creek.

(Bitting Creek.)

There's just a spring right there.

(And he was killed right up there.)

That's the Ned Spring right there.

(Old Ned Christie Spring. Well.)

Right there is where Ned Christie got his water. I remember when the old house set over there where he was killed. He wasn't killed there. He got out of the house. They shot a cannon on a big old post oak stump. Old man Joe Fountain lived here then. The house was right here..

And there used to be a big old post oak stump out there. Oh, it was that big. And they set the cannon on that. And they shot that house over there twice. And old Ned just sat over there and laughed at 'em. He was winning. Him and Arch Christie.

(Well.)

And they finally slipped up there and set it afire. Burned all of Arch Christie's hair off. He got away. And Ned got away and started up that hollow. Fool 'em. And the boy that was minding the horses up there shot him.
