

south of Chelsea town about -- about two miles south and about a mile west.

That's where -- .

(About where that area is -- .)

I remember that now. They had a town there (not clear) .

(Was that the same one -- .)

And rebuilt back in Chelsea..

(Well, what happened to Catale? Was it a town at one time?')

Yeah, Catale was pretty good town.

(Well, what happened? Did they -- .)

Well, they're just kinda like the rest of these little small communities, towns. I think they had two -- three stores there, dry good store, and depot and a school. They just -- I really don't know what went wrong. Maybe, just -- people moved out, moved away 'till there wasn't anything left there. It was in a kinda sand hill out east of Chelsea. I (not clear) and pretty bad.

(Well, now, outside of the school here at Winganon, there was no other school between here and Chelsea, was there?)

That's right. There was one over at south and east here named Waller.

(Waltus?)

Waller, W-A-L-L-E-R.

(Waller.)

It was named after an Indian family, Waller family. That was an old family.

I didn't mention a while ago. There still some of their offspring here, but there was lot of families moved out. There was school here with -- Winganon was one of the biggest. Winganon and Alluwe was a community.

It was in that country. Then, they had little school over at south and west here, Sunshine. My wife went to school there. It was an old school.
