

tagged along. When he got there wolves had the dogs surrounded, so this old dog came up real big like and scattered the wolves and saved the dogs.

She said she was telling one time at the table and they were laughing now and then and she thought they were laughing at her. But she said she got tired telling so she looked down on the table, and they had ate up the food. She said these stomp dances used to be sacred but its not anymore. They are just fooling around. She talked about funerals Indians used to have. She says it's not like it used to be. They dig graves straight now. It didn't used to be that way. They used to make caskets but now they sure are expensive. We've been paying on policy for thirty years. I guess I will get good casket when I die. She says she don't know Indian doctoring, but she's been accused of witch crafting some one. If she knew she would have lots of men coming to her home. She says she wants to go to Heaven and she gets her feeling hurt. (We encourage her and told her not to listen to any one talking, and just go on in spiritual way.)

She talked about her church and that one of her old member came back. Her son was made a pastor at Wewoka Indian Baptist Church. She told about her grandma's death and few days later, her mother went to church and rededicated that Sunday, and died ten days later. She is telling about her niece that comes to see her from Oklahoma City. She talked about her kids, they come to see about her.

(I asked her if she believes in ghosts.)

Yes, I believe in ghost, because sometimes, I have nightmares. She told about her niece seeing a ghost at the church camp house. Her niece came kinda late and as she was going in the church, she looked toward camp house and saw some one through the window like she was setting the table and she thought it was Mrs. Leitka in Church. There as no one over therē. She said she raised her kids by working for people. Her husband was no help to her. Her last husband. She talked about one of her son-in-law that she didn't like. She said they wore long dresses and she still does but now they wear real short
