

of it.

(What kind of medicine did Apache John have?)

He's had something like buffalo medicine. Same as that old man, that same outfit, he use. So that's all I know about it.

(Where did they get these medicines?)

They get em somewhere some of them Muscaleros, they got some of that medicine like that. I don't know some kind of herbs. Roots. They mix it I guess. They mix it with paint, this ground dirt, this red paint. They mix it. When they get through doctoring, well they doctor you they always use it. Just like sand rock they just rub it rub, their cheeks you know. Dress up you might say. When they get through with you they do the same thing. They paint you.

(How did a guy in the old days know he was a doctor?)

Well, I don't know that part. All I know is how he got to be a doctor. All I know he was a doctor, Indian doctor. Where he leared to be a doctor I don't know, but the way I heard the old people way back, they get out somewhere and lay out lay there three four days, ...four days. Nothing, just lay there. No eat or drink. Then want to be a doctor. Maybe something come along maybe pit them in a way you might say, or bless them you might say. Give them that power. Whatever it be. They give him that so he be a doctor. So I guess that what they done. So that's how come he be a doctor, that way. Pretty good.

(What happens when these guys die, all these old men? Why didn't anybody get their medicine then?)

Nobody got it. You had to know something about it. Old Indians. You had to know their something before you go ahead and be a doctor like the old man. Just like myself, I don't know anything about it. I've seen the old
