

very big, but there was a mighty little, a pinch of it. (several sentences in Osage) He met Uncle John Whitehorn and Charlie Whitehorn (several sentences in Osage) Don't turn him down. Go ahead. You go ahead and do what they're asking you. You go ahead and do it for them (words in Osage) You know it. He said you go with me. You take me there last years that I went. You understand it and you go ahead and do it and complete the work. (sentence in Osage) Because he said that he was going to leave that in my hands and so, (words in Osage) We was there. Otis heard it. He told me three times. I said all right. (sentence in Osage), I said. (sentence in Osage) He talks to me every day in that line. He tells me what our names are and all down the line (words in Osage) told me that too. And so I told (Osage name) that I will. I'll accept his word. But I was just wondering when you folks come home, where do you stay?

Mrs. Maker: We stay at his mother's place.

Out here?

Mrs. Maker: Uh-hum north of town.

Out to the--

Mrs. Maker: Out to Mrs. Maker's. We're living over there with her.

Way out there to Simmons?

Mrs. Maker: Uh-huh.

That's where you stay. But (finishes sentence in Osage) He does that in early.

Mrs. Maker: In Early.

Early. (sentence in Osage) So this child can go through the day, he said, for many days to come. (sentence in Osage) Its early in the morning. Not up in here or not noon. No, its early in the morning because this child can go through this day and go on. (sentences in Osage) He don't name them at mid of the day. It's early. It's really early. He names'em. Do it to Buddy Gray and his brothers (finishes in Osage) And all Otto's children. Otto and Josephine. He named all of them and he named Ira's too. Freddie and his sister. He names them two. And I don't know how many more. And Nora's too at Fairfax. We went over there. We stayed all night in (finishes sentence in Osage) I follow him. I take him. We stayed all night there,
