

over there.

Mr. Maker: We all of us full-bloods always fighting among ourselves. That's how come these other fellas to get in there.

Mrs. Green: Yeah. Somebody get some of these younger mens in there. They being told. They hear the people talk. They could bring that up and go before the commissioner. And they said that--I don't know now--I heard that the northern Indians, Alaska and all up in there, they didn't like this new commissioner Nixon got. But I heard again that he was going to leave and they're going to put another one in there. So, I don't know. They said he don't like Indians. The one that Nixon put in there when he was elected.

Mr. Maker: He's going to have to like 'em 'cause that's his job.

Mrs. Green: But that's what they said. Now, (Osage name), he don't like Indians. That's what that Eskimos and all of them said. Where he come from, he come from Alaska.

MORE ABOUT POLITICIANS

Mr. Maker: You know, Sylvester Tinker, he went out west here a couple of weeks ago. Out to Nevada where they had tribes from all over the United States. There they met with the vice-president of the United States. And told him what their needs and their wants, you know. Sylvester was appointed by the governor to go out there, you know. And I never have seen him to see what he said out there. What the other Indians said, or what the vice-president or what he said, you know. I kinda like to--

Mrs. Green: Hear that.

Mr. Maker: Yeah.

Mrs. Green: Well, he's a republican, isn't he?

Mr. Maker: Yeah, they're all republicans, so is Sylvester. That's how come he's in there, you know.

Mrs. Green: He said something to Charlie, I heard. Uncle Charlie said, he didn't have no Indian blood in him. Somebody told Sylvester and he jumped Uncle Charlie.

Mrs. Maker: Oh my.

Mrs. Green: He's going to be our next chief though. That's
