

(Well, my grandpa, Jim Hokah (?), out here were brothers.)

They were brothers, were they.

(Yeah. Uh-huh.)

I know they was kin somewhere. But I forgot just how it was.

I didn't know whether your daddy was, your grandpa was a sister or brother to Lousie or how it was.

(Old man Jim Hokah (?), they was all--I might refresh your memory, and Danny Jean married his sister.)

Yeah. That's right. Yeah. That's right. Helen. Yeah. Well, I think, I believe we was there on Hokah (?) place two years, there.

(Well do you remember old man Hokashie and his wife?)

Oh, yeah. Yeah, I remember Jim Hokashie. Yeah old man Jim and Louise. Yeah-h-h. Course there's where I got acquainted with Toehok. You know Gus. And we always called him Toehoe.

(Yeah.)

I don't know why, but they did. So, we all went to school there, see. I went to school with Jim, and Roy, Fred. Went to school with Nellie White. There's Nettie White, Jim and Roy, Fred and Grace, Wes. You know, Ella and Dan, they had two children, you know. Old man they called him, Howard, and Grace. We went to school with them.

(Howard go to school there, too?)

Oh, yeah.

(What kind of building was that? Was it a frame building?)

It was just a frame building, yeah. Leonard, at that time just a little old, well, it was a school about like one of these homes, here, you know at that time. But of course, it had a partition between where the different classes, had two different classes there.

(Well, did like Mr. and Mrs. Hokah, did they speak English very well?)

Yeah. Oh, yeah. Yeah, old Jim and her both talked pretty good English. Uh-hum. Yeah.

(Who else kind of lives around there? Did old George Pitts live up in there about that time?)

Yeah. George Pitts lived up north there on the old place up there.

(Where was his boys at then? Paul and them?)
