

it last. Well, old Marcus, he got it, I guess, from his dad, and run it. But first the old man was running it. And you know, they had a shooting scrap here, you know. Back there then. Well, I think they had this shooting scrap while we was in Chickasaw nation. But, I think this Wesley Fraley, I believe it was his name. Dan Parks he killed, there in the street. Well, wasn't long until old man Fraley he was up at Pawhuska and he seen Dan on the corner there. I think it was along about where the smoke house is. But anyway old man Fraley walked up to him and just caught him by the shoulder, turned him around. He said, "Dan you killed my boy, didn't you?" Boy, he just pumped him full of lead. Emptied his gun. Now that's what they told me. But that must have been while we was in Chickasaw Nation. But Dan Fraley killed him. He sure killed him.

(Yeah, this, they musta had a marshall around here out of Fort Smith didn't they? I believe they had a special marshall.) They had U.S. Marshall here. Old Wiley Haine was a U.S. Marshall here at that time. And he was U.S. Marshall until he died. (That's old John Haines and them's daddy?) Yeah. Yeah. Yeah, I used to play with old John. We lived down here, in the bottom down in here. There was three, I think there was three families lived down there when we came back over here at Hominy. We lived down there in a tent too. All of them lived in tents there. Seith Thomson, I forget who all. But anyway that must have happened while we was down in Chickasaw Nation. I'm pretty sure it was, while we was down there in Chickasaw Nation, five years. That happened while we was down there, pretty sure. You know, back there then, Leonard in them days, it wasn't nothing to come in town on Saturday. Well, it was just about ever day you'd see them but Saturday you seen a lot of them.

OLD BLANKET INDIANS

These old Blanket Indians, Now, they wore their blankets, and their G-strings, leggings, you know, mocassins. (Yeah.)

That's the way they dressed. And they wore them blankets, now. They wore them blankets. And somebody said to one of them. I
