

of a evening. Course, his breath was cutting off, you know. He never lost his mind. He just had same mind. (Sentence not clear).

(How about the rest of your kids? Do most of them settle a lot around here or have they all moved off?)

Yes, all except one. One's living at Ada, the boy.

Unidentified voice: (not clear)

He said we --

Unidentified voice: (not clear)

(He must be big.)

And I got one boy lives up here, you know, Deke. He sure big, ain't he?

Unidentified voice: Mmm-humm, yeah. (laughter)

(Well, now, your daughter that was here, now, she lives at Dallas, doesn't she?)

She lives in Dallas. But most of them live around here. Yeah, I got one that lives Peggs, and I got one on the road to Oaks, Locust Grove. And I then I got one right here, right over yonder. I'd cross over the hill, but it's in the other section.

(Yeah.)

She married a Bailey, white man. They all married white people.

(They did?) (Laughter) (Yo-Ne-Ga.)

(Next few seconds of tape are not clear.)

INDIAN TERRITORIAL DAYS

(Well, I was going to ask you, Dolly, back when you all was growing up-- well, like before you went off to Chilocco. Actually, you lived here. You was a little girl when this was still Cherokee Nation before it became a state. Was times hard back then, and how did the Cherokees lived?)
