

(Let's see then, that area that was the community of Maple, or still is, got it's name from a grove of maples that stood by a spring.)

Yeah.

(Well. Sometime referred to as Maple Spring. First store operated by, the place was by Samuel Martin. And also, the first post master. Most interesting.)

I don't know whether he's got any information on Akins there or not. Could be that the other book that I have. It's been so long since I looked at this other one.

(I just wondered that there was more than one location of the Sequoyah district courthouse?)

I just don't know. You know /name not clear/. This Mr. Garver or some older person just to have to... Anybody up around Maple probably might tell you that. I just don't know whether there was or not.

(But in connection when they did have the courthouse there, they also had a trading post there, and a school house.)

See, they had a trading post down here.

(Yeah.)

On up here the military road run right through, by this Sweetown. Cross it. The old military road. There was trading post I think down here at Muldrow on the Gunner farm.

(Yes.)

On down in there. But now that is...about that courthouse that you ask--

(Well, that...)

An old timer could tell you something and I wouldn't have known that.

(Yes. Let's see then...1905 is when it was torn down.)

I'm sure there'd be somebody up there that will probably know.

(Probably so. That's most interesting.)

Now, my daddy, I know, could probably tell and maybe my mother. Some of these older people ought to know.
