

you. So why not come out, help me some? And when you help it helps you know, helps the whole community." But so many have an excuse for not coming you know. Well, lots of times I don't feel like going but I, you know, go ahead and go anyway. But lots of times I get kind of disgusted because other people don't want to help. Like I feel like they should. They appreciate me doing things for them. But they don't try to help me.

(Yeah, I understand what you mean.)

SUCCESSFUL VENTURE OF MAKING A WELL FROM A SPRING IN COMMUNITY

I'll tell you about the spring in our community. There were about twenty-three people I mean 23 families in our community who were hauling water from the road side spring and it was just an old open shallow well, really. You know it was walled up, the sides with brick. Not bricks but rocks and it always had water in it. You know, during a drought or rainy season or anytime it had lot of water in it. And people hauled water out of there by the barrel fulls. And they'd dip their bucket down and you know, you can't do that without getting your hands in the water. They'd maybe hold the jug under until it filled. And people would come along and wash their feet in it, I imagine. One time they found a dead dog in it and we've seen, well, neighbors have seen cows drinking out of that when it was high enough for them to reach. Someone saw a deer down there drinking out of it. And there was an old willow tree over hanging this and leaves would fall in, bugs would fall in, grasshoppers, and snakes. You know, they were always fishing something out of that spring. But still everybody had to get their water there at the spring. So they'd clean it out and they'd keep using it. And I decided it was a good source of water but we needed that sanitation project that had been all around us. And I thought if I talked to Chief McIntosh about it then we could maybe get the sanitation project in our community. So I talked to him about it and he said, "You write it all down in black and white and hand it to me at the council meeting." "And we'll see what can be done." And I thought well, I'll make it good, you know. I'll make a picture of the old spring with an old anti-freeze can sitting there by it and there was
