

gets hungry, you know they pray, you know and went on them hunts, you know, you get tired buying food then, see. And they received it, you know, and that's how come we come along this way.)

Just like a story was told about when they couldn't find the food, couldn't find game. Man go out just every direction, send scouts, no game. Something's keeping them away. Throught that hard winter, and they go so certain kind of a vine. It's not just any kind of vine, certain kind, myself, I don't know but my father used to tell us that the people used that. They'd cut it, cut it up just like you would sweet potatoes, and they say they cook that. And it taste just like sweet potatoes. And that's what they eat, during that hard winter when they couldn't find no game and it happened that, you know, they always have a certain well, that they go to. This group of people goes to this well, and that, you know, there's lot of them in them days. And they make wells, you know. And it happened that they had a meal on this root, or vine, and this little girl had it all over her mouth, you know. Just like you eat meat, you know, and get it all over your mouth. You know how a child would, you know, and they eat meat you know, and get it all over their mouth. That's the way it was with this girl. She went to this well, and it must have been close to her tent. Winds blowing and still she went on to get a drink of water. And when she was there, a gust of wind came and just seemed like it stopped. And this wind.....
