

(Did you graduate?)

I went as far as that school they had. I went to Wetumka Boarding School.

(Oh. Did you have Indian teachers or white teachers?)

Indian teachers.

(Oh.)

But they can talk to us in Creek outside. But when we stepped in the door they wouldn't talk to us in Creek.

(They didn't want you all to talk Creek.)

Uh-huh. No. They said we were there to learn English in that and they teach us that.

(What grade did you get to?)

Eighth.

(Eighth grade.)

After we finish eight they give us some kind of book but I don't know what it was. But it was some kind of (words not clear).

(Uh-hum.)

And when that was over they was through with us. See just went to eighth grade in that Wetumka Boarding School.

(Oh. And you didn't try to go anywhere else.)

Huh-uh. I come home and stayed home and worked.

CONCERNING CIVIL WAR

(Do you know anyone by the name of Isparhecher(?) ?)

I heard of him.

(What was he, a Creek chief?)

I don't know what he was. I heard, I guess he was. I know Chito Harjo.

(Was he a chief, or something?)

No, he was --well he lived down this way. Married some of the neighbors.

He made a kind of war and they scattered and that's all I know.

(Uh-huh. Did you ever hear anything about the Honey Spring War?)
