

Irene: That's what I heard, too.

Roberta: Because George is a Comanche. He's not on the Comanche roll--he's on the Kiowa-Apache roll. But he's got Comanche daddy. And Tohay, he's a Kiowa. But we're still all together, I don't care what he says!

Irene: All right! Blackie (Clarence Chalepah, Irene's brother) has no home to go. He's Kiowa-Apache. He has no home to go (to) and he had fourteen children but three of them--well, two of them are married and the boy is trying to get married. And he has the rest of them--eleven children, and he has no place to go. No home. Now, see where they're staying in that little house (in Anadarko)--to find rent. And I told him and his wife to go to this low housing (new low-cost housing facilities in Anadarko) here in town. But you got to be eligible for something, I don't know. Anadarko has that low-housing--

Roberta: We wouldn't have a shot either, here in town (Apache), because we have land. For that low housing. I said I don't think I want to be paying sixty dollars a month when I could be paying that on something I could own. But the thing is getting a loan or a down payment--or something. You know, a lump sum to get started. We can make the payments all right, but we don't have nothing to get started on--the loan or the down payment. And I said I'd just as soon be paying on something that's gonna be mine.

Irene: And my brother's just dragging his kids here and there! Eleven of them. And we feed some of them and every now and then he gets something and then he helps us.

Jordan: Well, does the town of Apache have a low cost housing project?

Roberta: Yes. They're all finished, ready to move in, but they're just checking them out--quick as you tell them how much you're making and how much land you got--

Irene: What do you think of this at Cement--we're (The Chalepah family) the ones that sold three acres to the low housing. And my brother don't have a place to move. You know I was just thinking about that. We sold three acres
