

the names off, where they issue caps, and shoes, shorts and etc.

(Ah-hum, Amos Tiger is ah, is he some of your acquaintance?).

No.

(He was quite a wrestler, in --)

He's a boxer, you mean.

(Boxer, yeah.)

Yeah! I know Amos.

(You were at Haskell in 18 ?)

My wife was the last graduate of Carlile.

(Well)

I mean the last Creek girl, that graduated out of Carlile. She was the last class. You turn right there, where you see road containers. They cutting new roads, through here now.

(Both interrupt each other now.)

They changing all this country around here.

(Changing all this country side now. Even in all in this country now. Even all over in the hillside. On the other side of Grand River. It's all changing. Bulldozing of the hills, building houses all over.)

My grandfather was Coweta Nicco, one time. And he was ah-my uncle, I mean, not my uncle. That was my great-grandfather, my grandfather he was, what they call Chustunúgee.

(Ah-huh)

(Sentence not clear) Tyner, I've, I've known the one at Tulsa. I can't think of his name.

(There is several of them over in Tulsa?)

Yeah? Osages?

(That's the Broken Arrow Indian Church.)
