Money is given to the Gourd Dancers. Fanman announces money is given to the club. He says: "Not the country club but the Gourd Dancers."

Next is the Charlie Curtis special. It is given by his wife, Mary Curtis. Fanman says she had requested a special song to be sung in memory of Old Lady Stonecalf, who passed away yesterday. She was the only child of Chief Stonecalf and a close cousin to Mary. Mary wants to honor her for the last time, probably. She was one of the oldest ladies in our tribe. Ask Hailman Little Coyote to give a special song for her. After that, request Gourd Dance song for the Charlie Curtis special. Hailman is a Cheyenne chief. Fanman says:

"Mary wants to get this off her chest--in her memory--so she can dance again. That's way of showing our grief and also showing our culture to the Indian ways of life in our tribe. I wish you all stand up and remove--for this lady. This is our Chief Song--for her."

He adds that those who want to participate can go and stand by Mary. A woman lulus. At the end of the song another woman lulus. This song was the Cheyenne Chiefs' Song. At the end of this song Hailman Little Coyote gets a gift from Mary in honor of Old Lady Stonecalf who was almost 90 when she died. May Topah (Kiowa) gets a gift of a table of goods from Mary. (Mary Curtis had set up two tables of gifts to be given away.)

Next is the Charlie Curtis special with a Gourd Dance song being sung. In this special:

Lee gets a gift from Charlie's granddaughter.

Letha Tahlo (probably Kiowa) gets a gift from Mary.

Sophie Rhodes of Clinton gets gift from Mary. Charlie Curtis is a World War I veteran.

Eva Seipaholai (Setpahoodle ?) gets a gift.

Fanman says:

"Roy (Nightwalker) is going to announce the Fisher special. Going to explain more about it than I do. I haven't been around those Fishers. If I go visit them, they're gonna run me off--my auntie there. She's mad at me."
