

Roy Nightwalker comes from the drum to the speaker's stand to announce for the next special. He says:

"Uncle Charlie Curtis recently was made a Cheyenne chief. So he don't have to do the dishes after this. Well, I can explain about the Fisher family. This little boy here, Bobby Dean Fisher, Jr. (a little boy about 2 or 3 years old, dressed in Gourd Dance outfit) is the son of a boy that's now in the service and he was stationed in Viet Nam. But he's been in Cambodia but they don't know where he's at today. This little boy is gonna join the Cheyenne-Arapaho Gourd Dancers. His mother is the daughter of the new Kiowa tribal chairman, Gus Palmer--Ladonna Palmer Fisher. The folks request one song to be dedicated to Bobby Fisher, Sr. After that, four Gourd Dance songs so the Gourd Dancers can sing and dance with the rest of the dancers. First song will be the Kiowa Veterans Song. They have an older son, Lyman Fisher, Jr., also a member of the C & A Gourd Dancers and a veteran of the Viet Nam war."

Imogene Fisher is the little boy's paternal grandmother. She's a northern Cheyenne. She is short and stocky and wears northern Plains style boots and a shift-dress. She has about four or maybe more tables of gifts set up in the arena. The boy's mother is a Kiowa and for this reason a number of Kiowa relatives are present. During the war Dance processional several Kiowas dance, including an old man, Oliver Tenedoh, Julia Daingau, May Topah, Gus Palmer. All the Gourd Dancers dance during the Gourd Dance songs. During this special:

Gus Palmer pledges $25.00 to the Gourd Dancers. Three of the officers acknowledge this pledge by shaking his hand. Gus is dressed in Gourd Dance regalia and has red and blue blanket on. He also gives money to the drummers. Bill Kaulaity comes over to acknowledge. Gus speaks over the microphone, thanking people for supporting his grandson, etc. Roy Nightwalker announces the giveaway.

Bill Kaulaity called to get money for drummers from Gus.

Ed Shedlow gets gift from Wanda Wilson--he gets a table of goods--the second from the north. A man chants in Cheyenne, probably Roy Nightwalker who is supposed to know how to announce in old time fashion. A woman lulus.

Marilyn Osage, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Osage of Hammon, is called. Cynthia Osage and her daughter are called.

Georgia Tsotaddle (or Zotigh) is called and given a table of goods. Again the chanting in Cheyenne.

Bobby White Skunk called.

Imogene Fisher pledges 25 pounds of beef for next year.

Gertie Haumpy (Kiowa) called.

Laura Tahlo (Kiowa) called.

Gus Palmer thanks people from the south (Kiowas) for coming and giving him support for this afternoon.

Bill Koomsa called by David Fanman to shake hands with his grandson.

Next special is for Helen Beard, the Arapaho princess for this year's Anadarko Indian Exposition. She is Arapaho but was raised by Lorenzo Beard and his wife (who are Cheyennes). Mrs. Beard has been dead for some time. Dave Fanman compliments the Beards. They request a Gourd Dance song for their special.
