

Irene: I just went over there and I just told them.

Birdie: I think I'll do that.--

Irene: And he paid us for what water he drew out of that. But we didn't know--we just didn't keep, you know, how many gallons--but he paid us for it.

Jordan: They ought to.

Irene: I think we should get paid for what water--

Birdie: Because, see, we could use it for washing dishes and bathing and all that, you know.

Irene: You could boil it, you know--

Birdie: Mama and them used to drink it! I remember Daddy used to walk down there--

Irene: They used to carry water from the creek until it goes dry.

Birdie: As long as it was running, you know, it was all right. But if it stopped, we just never used it. We got a cistern out here, but it's got a big crack in there and it won't hold water. When it rains lots and holds a little water, we always use it. Draw it out and we really use it up in just a little while. But it don't hold water.

(End of Side A)