

(All different tribes, isn't it?)

They're from broken homes.

(You know that's something I'll never be able to understand about the broken homes. I never can see why there should be one in the beginning. But I know they do happen. My old folks used to say long time ago, there wasn't anything such things as broken homes. They said they don't remember about people getting divorce everytime the sun come up.)

Yeah.

(But I guess that's one thing that changes along with everything else.)

MORE ABOUT TURKEY FORD - GROVE

(Speaking about Bassett Grove, was there a man by the name of Bassett? Is that how it got its name?)

Joe Bassett. He used to live little ways from there and that--his allotment, I guess, joined that place. I guess-- I guess took that back.

(Well, they've got a nice location there as pretty a location I ever saw.)

The paper I guess didn't know what to call it.

(Yeah.)

Nearest Turkey Ford. They just called it Turkey Ford.

(Well, maybe, its a good thing at least they used the name of an Indian there of old man Ford and his wife--Turkey. In early days then Turkey Ford Store, was that the only store along the Cowskin river here?)

Uh-huh. No, there was another store. I guess it was the same store 'cause its just down the road a little ways. Old man Hensley had a store there. Then they moved it up further back call it Turkey Ford store then.

(Was it on the river?)

No.

(Back on this side.)

Back on this side.

(Yeah. That was before they had the town of Grove then, wasn't it?)

Yeah. Oh no.

(They had Grove too?)

They had Grove. That was just a long ways to go to a little store and some of these Indians did.

(Yeah. Well, I guess, in the early days it was a long ways to go someplace to get something. That little place they call Tiff City. Is it an old place too?) Old place. That's right on the state line.

(Yeah. I guess long time ago maybe they had to go too.)

That was a tough city long time ago.

(I bet it was.)
