

(Well.)

Washed way because it's soft marble, soft sandstone, or something that way. Those old, old things, you know. But it is a lovely place. This corner is off--this corner is off here and back here because the library is here.

Unidentified speaker: Well, isn't there another building on the business side?

Mrs. Vowel: Well, you see, this is Minnesota avenue. This is 7th street over here. On the 7th street there's four or five buildings over here. And each one of 'em have a corner--a slice of it off here. The city, they built it up to the land, but the city said you don't have any outside fire escape. You have to have one for safety sake. They built it on the land anyway. Four feet over. It was better to have done that than to have had to carry a piece from that. But they chopped this off. They dug out here. They've got this corner off over here. I think they have this corner off over here now. But now they say, it's an acre and nine-tenths.

Unidentified speaker: Four--

Mrs. Vowel: Instead of three.

(From three.)

It's over an acre that they had disposed of, you see.

(An acre and one-tenth.)

Nine-tenths.

(Nine-tenths, yeah. That is an interesting account.)

It's a high mound. You go up a high--oh, 20 steps off the street. Other buildings--this building is down low. Library and the parking lot, it's down low. It's all there.
