

(And if there's two or three of your grandchildren in the room and you're talking right to them?)

nesi'whw' -- the same thing.

(And if you're talking about just one of your grandchildren to someone else, how would you refer to her?)

nesi'w;

(And would you use this same term if you're talking about your son's sons or your daughters' children?)

Yeah.

* * * *

(Let me ask you--if you had sisters and your sisters had children, how would you call your sister's son?)

Same way, neihae'ae

(And what about her daughter?)

nwt'w.nae

(That's the same as your own daughter?)

Yeah. All the same.

(What about your brother's children--do you call them the same?)

If it's a girl, nae.s'bi

(Would that be if you're talking directly to her?)

Yeah.

(What if you're talking about your brother's daughter to someone else, how would you refer to her?)

I would say nae.s'bi --the same thing.

(And what if you're talking about two of your brother's daughters?)

nae.s'bihw' --I don't know where that -hw' always come from!

(And what about--if you're talking to your brother's son--how would you?)
