

(Was he ever married?)

No. He died young. He died before I even married his brother.

(Did you know him?)

Yeah, I knew him.

(How did your husband come to take the name, "Howling Buffalo?")

Well, you know, they got it mixed up when they had the allotment. My husband, his name was different. And his brother was the one that was allotted, and he already died. So they just put him on there.

(And then he got the name, Lincoln, when he went to school?)

Yeah, when he went to school.

(Who gave him that name?)

Oh, somebody at Haskell--oh! Not Haskell--Carlisle.

(He went to Carlisle?)

Yeah.

(That was before you married him, wasn't it?)

Yeah.

(How many years did he go to Carlisle?)

I don't know how many years, but when I come to know, he was in--he was in Chilocco, too.

(Was he very much older than you?)

Way older.

(About what age were you when you married him?)

I was about sixteen.

(And about what age would he have been?)

I don't know how old he was. Way older than I. He was born in--I think--eighteen something--I forgot.

(I've forgotten what year you told me you got married--do you remember what year it was right now?)

Seven.
