

are remembering. We're just--line here is short so you have to come up and (stand in line for turn to give away.)

At this time I want to introduce to you Rosetta LeClair. Many times she has appeared here during a pow-wow and seen the loss of Susie Blackman. Just can't overcome it. She was a good woman. She had good thoughts, and extended those thoughts to me. Welcomed me. Invited me. And every time I come here, Susie Blackman strikes me in my heart with tears. I've thought a lot of her and now today in her recognition, I want to do something. Amanda Bates, you're asked to come and shake hands with LeClaire. Susie's daughter is here with her. Amanda Bates. Madiline Sankey, you're also asked to come and shake hands with the party. These two women that have been mentioned have been very nice--good--to her, and she never has forgotten. Bruce Haumpy, you're asked to shake hands with Danny Old Crow. He's giving a recognition of James Nightwalker who has recently passed away. Ruby Bates, here, in honor of her mother, deceased, is giving five dollars to the drummers. Will the head drummer come and acknowledge the five. Josephine Sleeper at this time is giving the recognition of Glen Lumpmouth, who has passed away not too long ago. Many times she has seen him display himself here with his family. This is the first time that you don't see him here. And no doubt that he would like to see us go on. But things that take place here, and not step back. Ethel Stoneroad, you're asked to come and shake hands with Josephine Sleeper, in honor and respect of Glen Lumpmouth, deceased. There's a woman here--Mrs. Armor--you're asked to come and shake hands with Josephine. Betty Ann Friday from Bartlesville is here to attend the pow-wow, and gives the recognition of her uncle, Glen Lumpmouth. He's asking Susie Blackowl to come acknowledge the gift and shake
