

hands with her. (Pause) In behalf of Nettie Star's brother-in-law, Glen Lumpmouth, we're calling Eva Oldcrow to come and shake hands. Gloria Durango, you're asked to come shake hands with Maud Harrison, uncle to Glen Lumpmouth--giving a recognition of the deceased. Gloria Durango--you're asked to come and shake hands. Ella Sleeper, in behalf of Glen Lumpmouth, deceased--the words that he expressed for the people of this community will still echo, regardless of his being gone. We can't help but look for him. We all know the good Lord gives and takes. The breath of life belongs to Him. Whenever your time comes, you're going to answer for it. So in his behalf--Glen Lumpmouth--I wanted to do something. Gertie Haumpy (Kiowa), you're asked to come and shake hands. Betty Bailey wants to give a recognition of her father--a man that has devoted his time to his family--recognition of the family--here--on this grounds. On his behalf we're asking Nina Kodaseet to come and shake hands with her. She also wants to pledge twenty-five dollars to the next pow-wow. Pow-wow committee please come and acknowledge this pledge. (Pause. Some man says, "Take him out. He's drunk. Where's you law?") Ruby Tiger, in recognition of Glen Lumpmouth--the words that have been said here by him--a man that has devoted his time to help his fellow man. Today we look around--he's not here. But nevertheless the words that have been said by him will always echo. We'll never forget him. At this time we're asking Susie Blackowl to come and shake hands. She also wants to pledge twenty-five dollars to the next pow-wow. Will the pow-wow committee come and acknowledge the pledge. (Pause) Rhoda Lumpmouth feels this way. I want to relay what she have said to the public. That place where we are camping at this time, Glen Lumpmouth put up his shade there. And she felt like it ought not to be vacant. She made it over here. Put up her tent and her shade. What he had done here for the people no doubt will never be for-
