

anybody by leaving things anywhere. Well, they know it don't belong to them but I don't know why they wanna go and pick it up. We never did, we was watched real close, but it wasn't they wasn't mean to us, they just explained things to and ah. I understand what it mean by them keeping eye on us and watching. Even when we go to the bakery and the boys are crazy. I never did wanna go down in the bakery room to go in there and get my bread with my platter, go downstairs. Because when the girls go down there to fill out their platter to bring it up and put it on the tables, there well them boys will chase them. Them boys will chase them and you know, try to grab em by their aprons or their dresses and they'd scream you know. So I found out. I, I just seen my girl friend got like that. So next time I told her that I'm not going downstairs. And she said, "Why?" I said them boys are too crazy I said. So I went back and so I told the head cook and I told her them boys are trying to catch them girls in the bakery. So she said, she said, "Get your platters and come down. I'm going down. I'm going set there til all the bread is served." So I, that's the only time I went down there. And I told, told and she asked those girls she said, "Is there any of you girls that these boys caught you," she said. "I got the report. You boys come here to slice the bread for the girls. You'll didn't come here to try to play with the girls, if the principal finds out it won't be nice for you boys. So they changed the boys off. They put, they took them out and they put different boys in there and then we was free. You know how young teenagers, they don't mean anything but they just like to scare us, scare us girls. And of course we just in the young days, we don't know. And we always be just scared of them. We'd run off from the and scream. But now everythings different. But I really did, I really did like that school. Because that's ah, I'm always thankful that I went to that school, because that's lots of things that I had, I had learned from that place. And I always tell my little ones. My my daughter now, she went to Fort Sill and then she went to Riverside. And now my baby boy I just start him to school when he was six years old and in Mountain View. All right, the next fall the school
