

you know. She'll change her clothes and she'll just throw em somewhere and when I get ready to clean up dresses here and brassiere here and underskirt over there and I'll pick em up and put them all in one place. Yea, that's the, how much respect they had. I often say to myself and just think about a lot of things. Sometimes I be setting out there on the porch and just think and think. I look back and my mother used to say when you get to my age you gonna look back and you gonna be thankful. I always tell my daughter that. Even though my mother is gone I still thankful for all the things she had taught me. And I say now you got kids growing up it's up to you to talk to your kids. I always tell her that. Now I got a grandson that I raised before our home booked up.. I don't have to get after him. I just set him down and talk to him in a nice way. Now to this day when I get up there he goes to school and come back and his clothes are hanging up there just like I taught him. It's up to a person to show their love to your little ones and they'll follow along. That's what my mother used to say and that's just where I'm at.

(Gee, it must be good now to look back through all these years and see the children and grandchildren and great-grandchildren.)

Yes. I never did think I would ever reach to a place and when she tells me those things, I say on, why my mother want to talk things like that. She ain't gonna die. That's the way I used to feel. And it's just an all childless mind feeling and thoughts that I had. Now after I got so many years old my feelings is different from being as a young person's feelings. Seems like everything I do I just wanna be kind to people, I just wanna help all I can.

(You were talking about the children and the respect relationships, I would now like to know what do you think about the future for the children and also, do you think that it's good or bad that things have changed?)

Well, what you asked me in the back the difference I see of course to my judgment, I don't know about other people, but to my own opinion I think the back days where I was raised, I think the manners in raising our children up, I think it more better to raise our little ones like we was raised. It'll be more respect
