

Mary Red Eagle: I don't think he was.

(He wasn't?)

Mary: I don't think so.

(Alex wasn't, but I--maybe not.)

Mary: I think he was just one of the main men, and (rest of sentence inaudible.)

(I think Victor was, elected about 1929.)

Or something like that. Um-huh. (Mary talking in background.)

EDUCATION

(Where did you go to school, Fannie?)

I went to school to Wyandotte. There was a little mission out here, but I didn't go there. My brothers was there. They took me there when I was just a tiny little baby. And Mrs. Ray said they just carry me around in them laundry baskets from building to building. (laughter)

(You didn't go to the old Catholic Mission?)

No. Huh-uh.

(Your brothers went there didn't they?)

Levi did.

(I was thinking I saw his picture there.)

Um-huh. Levi did, but he's the only one. And from the Catholic--from that Mission, I went to Wyandotte. From Wyandotte, I went to Haskell.

(Oh. You went to school there didn't you? (talking to Mary.)).

Mary: Um-huh.

SPEAKS IN QUAPAW LANGUAGE

(They said you cried when you went away to school. (laughter) irrelevant conversation). All right now Fannie, we are going to talk in Quapaw.)

Fannie: Speaking in Quapaw and is joined by Mary Red Eagle.)

(What was it you asked her?)

Oh! I said I was glad to see her.
