

of jitterbug step)

Clinton: At this time, through generosity of these people, I'd like to present Mr. and Mrs. Reading with the sum of $16.50 to defray your trip home. ...Q. K. Next on the program, a special has been requested in honor of the little girl head-dancer, Georgia Moore, granddaughter of the "mayor" (a joke directed at Joe Neeley). Also Joe Neeley is the chairman of the Greenfield pow-wow committee (another joke). They have a pow-wow every 300 years! (Everyone laughs) Asking the family of Alfritch Heap-of-birds to get ready, immediately following this special.

(War Dance Song)

Clinton: You people have heard that song over and over at the pow-wows. The name of that song is "Come to my tent after nine o'clock--my husband will be at the night (unintelligible word)!" (Everyone laughs) Introduction is being made by Agnes Hamilton. She's awfully proud of this young lady who serves on the holiday committee and is more than willing, whenever she's called upon to serve as little girl head dancer. So at this time in her honor, we're calling on Amanda Bates to come forward and receive a gift. (Jess says Agnes is a cousin of Amanda Bates)

Jess: Sometimes they do that (cousins exchange gifts) But I've been taught by my father, old way, and I still carry that on--not to trade gifts. But to look at strangers when they come from Arizona, Montana, Wyoming, or any other place--just so they're strangers to the tribe. That's the ones--and not trade gifts. (Giveaways continue but tape difficult to understand because batteries in recorder had gotten weak and voices are fast and soft for the remainder of this side.
