

it down and Imogene made this house. Yeah, herself. She's sure good with a hammer.

(Did Frank help at all?)

Oh, he'd help her once in a while but he was working all the time. He was farming.

(Has Frank ever given you money or anything?)

Oh, no, no, no! No, he never give me nothing! They don't give me nothing. But me, I give all the time. When I had my claims, Ray and Frank and Frederick and Lewis and Dago, Eugene, and up to Adrian, and Dennis--eight pairs of boots I bought. And they were not just five dollars--they were not just eight dollars. All them. And then two pairs of pants apiece, and shirts. And then I went and bought Frank shoes and shirts. It cost lot of money. And then I bought Imogene shoes and dresses. And then I said, "All right--the rest of my money I'm going to enjoy it," I told them. So, they can't never say I never helped them. They never help me.

(What did they do with their money?)

They bought their home. You know, Imogene was the only one-- Frank don't get any (claims). Imogene bought that home with her money.

(Is it in her name, then, or both of their names?)

I don't know how they got it.

(Do you have any idea how much it cost them?)

I don't know, because she made application and the government come and checked that house and I don't know whether she got two hundred or five hundred apiece off her kids to help her pay for that house. And I don't know how much--I never did know how much it cost her.

(Before you all built this house, did you do most of the cooking for the whole family here?)

No, Imogene done the cooking. As soon as she got married she told me, "Now, you've been cooking for me all my life. Just stay away from the stove--I'm going to do it." That's how it was. And she kind of got me spoiled. I used to not want to cook when I'm alone. But I finally got my second wind.

(After Imogene and Frank got married was there ever a time when
